The following message is from Nathan at SXTHNK: SXTH's tuning division.

Important Update Regarding Hyundai Recall for Elantra N and Veloster N

Dear SXTHNK Customers,

We are aware of the recent recalls issued by Hyundai for the Elantra N and Veloster N models. These recalls include new ECU software that will be installed if your vehicle is taken to a dealership.

Please be advised that if you choose to proceed with the recall, the updated software will overwrite your existing tune and patch, causing them to be wiped out. Unfortunately, at this time, we do not have access to the new software version, which means we are unable to provide patches or tunes for the updated ECU.

*We understand this is frustrating and want to reiterate that you will lose access to your current tunes if the dealership updates your vehicle as part of the recall.*

Although this message is specifically a warning to N owners with a SXTH tuned ECU, we can speculate to extend this as a general notice:

Taking your car to Hyundai for the HPFP recall may result in your ECU being reflashed.

If your ECU is reflashed, and you are tuned, you will lose your tune.

At this point, SXTH, and presumably the rest of the N tuning market, does not have access to this new software, and thus you will lose access to any aftermarket tunes until this new software is cracked.

This notice does not advise you to ignore your car's recall and serves solely as information about the potential consequences.
